Introduction

The purpose of this work is to establish the genesis of my family in America, find the derivation of my unusual name, and, in so far as possible, arrange the descendants of the FOUNDER of the family in genealogical order. The genealogy is incomplete, for all of his descendants were not found. However, those who may care to trace their origin and history further, up or down, will find herein a foundation upon which to build.

It will be noted that the FOUNDER of the family had three sons and three daughters, all named in his Will, and repeated in the Will of his wife. Both Wills are on file with the Register of Wills of Baltimore, Md. His Will shows, also, the names of the tracts of land he owned which correspond with the names of tracts acquired by Jacob Ebaugh, John Jacob Ebaugh, Jacob Ebough, and Jacob Epaw from the Province of Maryland and the State of Maryland, which may be seen in the Hall of Records, Annapolis, Md.

The true name of the FOUNDER was found on his Will, reproduced elsewhere from a photostat of his signature. The maiden name of his wife was discovered in the Baptismal Book of the Reformed Lutheran Church of Manchester, Carroll County, Md., and is reproduced elsewhere. This baptismal book dates back to February 12, 1760, when the church was founded, and is now in custody of the pastor. The book is in a state of disintegration. It is a pity that it cannot be preserved forever, for it contains matters of family interest to others than ourselves. Our Family Name in it is spelled several ways prior to 1822, which will be shown. Translations of its records are in the hands of a few persons.

HENRY EBAUGH, eldest son of the FOUNDER, died intestate January 5, 1827. His estate was settled in court and the proceedings are filed in Baltimore Court House. From them the names of his nine sons and four daughters were learned. Jacob Ebaugh, born 10-21-1783, eldest son of HENRY, had nine sons and a daughter by his first wife, and four sons by his second wife. His Family Bible gives their names, dates of births, etc. Joseph Ebaugh, born 2-14-1809, eldest son of Jacob of HENRY, had fifteen children. Their names, etc., are recorded in his Family Bible. In this way, aided by living descendants, etc., the Line of HENRY was established in so far as shown.

JOHN JACOB EBAUGH was the second son of the FOUNDER. The names of his twelve children were secured from memoirs of his seventh son, Judge Adam Ebaugh, and from an old Luther Bible in custody of Paul L. Ebaugh of Baltimore. On the flyleaf of

The purpose of this book is to present the history of the family in America, and the development of the family from the early days of settlement to the present time. The family is the foundation of the nation, and its history is the history of the nation. The family is the source of the nation's strength, and its history is the history of the nation's progress.

It will be seen that the history of the family is the history of the nation. The family is the source of the nation's strength, and its history is the history of the nation's progress. The family is the foundation of the nation, and its history is the history of the nation. The family is the source of the nation's strength, and its history is the history of the nation's progress.

The first name of the family was found on the first page of the first book. The first name of the family was found on the first page of the first book. The first name of the family was found on the first page of the first book. The first name of the family was found on the first page of the first book. The first name of the family was found on the first page of the first book.

History is the story of the past. It is the story of the people who have lived before us. It is the story of the things that have happened to us. It is the story of the things that we have done. It is the story of the things that we are doing. It is the story of the things that we are going to do.

John Jacob Astor was the second son of the first son. He was the second son of the first son. He was the second son of the first son. He was the second son of the first son. He was the second son of the first son.

this Bible is written: "Sarah Ebaugh's Bible, given to her by her much respected mother at her death which was on the 2nd day of January, 1818. John J. was confirmed in the year 1770, February 10th. Mary Ebaugh was born on the 8th day of January. George Ebaugh was born on the 19th day of September. Catherine Ebaugh was born on the 8th day of December 1790. Joanna Ebaugh was born on the 20th day of February 1793. John S. Ebaugh was born on the 19th day of April 1795. Henry Ebaugh was born on the 19th day of September 1797. Jacob Ebaugh was born on the 6th of July 1799. David K. Ebaugh was born on the 18th day of January 1801. Eve Ebaugh was born on the 6th of April 1803. Adam Ebaugh was born on the 5th of August 1805. Benjamin Flowers Ebaugh was born 18 ———". (Here the ink had faded so that it could not be read farther). Their first child, Jacob, who died when three years old, was not recorded. With these aids and help of his living descendants, etc., the Line of JOHN JACOB was established in so far as shown.

GEORGE EBAUGH (my grandfather) was the youngest son of the FOUNDER. Births and baptisms of eight of his ten children are recorded in the Baptismal Book of the Reformed Lutheran Church of Manchester, Carroll County, Md. The other two may have been baptized at St. Paul's Lutheran Church, Upperco, Baltimore County, Md., or at home. Their grandmother joined St. Paul's 1795. Its early records were destroyed by fire. The Family Bible of Zachariah Ebaugh, youngest son of GEORGE, has the date of his birth; also, of his twenty-three children. With these aids and help of his living descendants, etc., the Line of GEORGE was established in so far as shown.

The Family Bible was a great institution. Marriage in those days was looked upon as the beginning of a new family. The presentation of a Bible to the newlyweds was a beautiful custom. Without the Family Bible the history of many a family would have been lost, for keeping Vital Statistics in public records did not begin until about 55 years ago. Marriage licenses were issued before that, but the license did not always show the date of marriage, or whether the parties ever were married. The authenticity of Family Bible records are accepted by authorities; therefore, they should be preserved with care.

To my great-grandmother, ANNA CATHERINE GIESS EBAUGH, who was the mother of all of us; and to all of the courageous mothers of the Ebaugh race, I bow in veneration. Many raised large families; lived long in contentment. Some went West to a strange land with their husbands, and helped make homes in the forests. The journey was long and tedious, over mountains and across rivers, in wagons with their little children, taking subsistence with them, or gathering it on the way. One family went in an ox-team wagon. How many mothers of today would take a trip like that, and keep smiling to the end of the long journey? I wonder!

SEQUENCE OF EARLY EVENTS

The Founder of the family arrived in Philadelphia September 22, 1752. He became a citizen of Baltimore County, Maryland, and applied for land. Warrant for 100 acres of land for him was issued September 21, 1753. Land was surveyed February 28, 1754, and title given same day.

The record prior to issuing Warrant has been lost.

"OBER LAND IN BERN"

The sketch above shows the layout of the home and mill in relation to the race, dam and Patapsco Falls. It will be noted that Indian Run was diverted from the Falls into the race. The tract extended farther north than is shown and, perhaps, farther south, but not as far east and west. The primary object of the Founder in purchasing this tract was to secure the water power of Patapsco Falls. Later, he acquired hundreds of acres adjoining the original tract. "Bite the Biter" tract, mentioned in his Will, joined "Ober Land in Bern" on the north. Hills rise from each side of the narrow valley through which Patapsco Falls passes, and the view is picturesque.

"But what's in a name? that which we call a rose by any other name would smell as sweet."—Shakespeare.

On September 22, 1752, the ship "Brothers" from Rotterdam, late from Cowes, came into the Port of Philadelphia with immigrants from Europe. The names of the women and girls and boys under 16 who were aboard are unknown, for the Captain's List of passengers was lost. Men and boys 16 and over had to qualify for admittance and subscribe their names to the Abjuration List. Among the 83 who signed were two named Jacob Ybach. That document is preserved in the State Archives of Pennsylvania, Harrisburg. The signatures of these two men are reproduced on the right above from a photostat furnished by the Department of Education, Harrisburg. On their left is a facsimile of the signature of Jacob Ybach who founded the EBAUGH family of Maryland, reproduced from a photostat of his Will furnished by the Register of Wills of Baltimore, Maryland. The Will is dated July 3, 1790.

Compare the one reproduced from the Will with the lower one reproduced from the Abjuration List. Make due allowances for 38 intervening years, the use of a different quill, and the unusual circumstances surrounding him each time. Then, if you are descended from an Ebaugh of Maryland and believe these signatures were made by the same hand, acknowledge this man as your progenitor!

Prof. Rupp, in his book of Pennsylvania Immigrants 1726-1776, says the other man was Jacob Ybach, Sr., which may lead to the belief the men were father and son. Family tradition says that two men of the same family came together; one settling in Pennsylvania under the name Ibach; the other in Maryland under the name Ebaugh. This history is confined to the Maryland group.

The first known time the name Ebaugh appeared in America was in a Maryland Warrant for land, dated September 21, 1753; secondly, in the survey of this land, dated February 28, 1754; thirdly, in the title to said land bearing same date as the survey, as you have seen. The Jacob Ebaugh, mentioned in these documents, was none other than the Jacob Ybach whose signature appears above. The Provincial authorities, who were poor spellers of certain foreign names, gave Ybach a phonetic English spelling to sound as near as possible to the foreign pronunciation. The first syllable

The University of Chicago Library is pleased to announce the acquisition of a new volume, "The History of the University of Chicago," by James H. H. H. This volume is a comprehensive history of the University of Chicago, covering the period from its founding in 1890 to the present. It is a valuable addition to the library's collection of books on the history of higher education in the United States. The volume is written in a clear and concise style, and is well illustrated with photographs and maps. It is a must-read for anyone interested in the history of the University of Chicago.

"Y" had the soft sound of "E", but "bach" could not be compounded with English letters to produce its foreign sound, so the authorities arbitrarily made it "baugh." Hence the derivation of the word "Ebaugh."

But Jacob Ybach never changed his name. He wrote Ybach to his dying day, as you see it from his Will. With one exception, when "Ebough" was written, the Colonials adhered to Ebaugh. With one exception, when John Jacob Ebaugh was written, the Land Records and other documents of Colonial days show but one given name, Jacob. His full name was John Jacob Ebaugh (Ybach). In his time most men followed the Puritan custom of using only one given name.

After the Revolution the name "Ebaugh" became corrupted. Land Office clerks at Annapolis made it "Epaw" and "Epaugh." The marriage record of his son GEORGE 1790 shows Epaugh in both church and court records. The U. S. Census of 1790 has it "Ephaugh" in Maryland and "Epagh" in Pennsylvania. The scribe who wrote the Will of the FOUNDER 1790 wrote the name several ways and put down "Catoron" for Catherine. The man who wrote "Catherine's" Will (1803) spelled her name right. The War Department, War of 1812-14, has it "Epaugh." People were not so well educated then as now. "Once there was a reverend judge who, to the shame of all the Bench, could write his name."

Some of the records of old Union Church of Manchester, Carroll County, Maryland, are in existence, and they show in part: the Family Name of the first six Ebaugh children baptized there (1760-1790) is recorded "Ibach;" next one (1791) "Ebach;" next two (1792-94) "Ibach;" next one (1797) "Ybach;" next one (1800) "Ibach;" next one (1800) "Ybach;" next one (1802) "Ebach;" next one (1802) "Epach;" next one (1804) "Ebach;" next one (1805) "Ybach;" next four (1809-10) "Ebaugh;" next one (1813) "Ybauch;" next one (1820) "Ebaugh;" next two (1821) "Ebach;" thereafter all were "Ebaugh," right back to the name given by the English Colonials. The Communicant's List of June 14, 1806, has four Ebaughs spelled "Ybach," and that of 1813 has two Ebaughs spelled "Ibach." It would seem that the pastors wrote the name according to their individual preferences; and it may be said that all were right, literally or phonetically, except "Epach" and "Ybauch."

Immigrants from German Switzerland, Rhenish Bavaria, Baden, Darmstadt, Wurtemberg and Alsace who settled in eastern Pennsylvania had manners of speech differing from each other so that, with some English words, they were merged into a common dialect known as the "Pennsylvania Dutch." And they had different ways of expressing themselves in writing before they came to Pennsylvania. Andony Zimmermann, Mathias Geyler and Andreas Geyler came on the same ship with Jacob Ybach; all of them marked the Y or y in their names as you see it in the FOUNDER'S signature, which was their way of writing to express the sound of E or e.

Family tradition says that Jacob Ybach came from the canton of Bern, Switzerland. He had dear memories of Bern, else he would not have named his first grant of land "Ober Land in Bern," upon which he built his home and business and where he lived and prospered until he died in September, 1790. Switzerland is the oldest republic, founded August 1, 1291, when three cantons entered into a pact to safeguard a system of local self-government in opposition to the officials set up by the Hapsburgs. Twenty-two cantons are in confederation now. While the official languages are German, French, Italian and Romansch, in fifteen cantons the prevalent tongue is a Swiss-German dialect or Swiss; in five it is a French dialect; in one, Italian; and in Graubunden half the people use the Romansch or Ladin. These idioms of speech were, doubtless, accompanied by idioms of writing, which may account for the way our FOUNDER wrote his name.

"Ybach" as you see it in the FOUNDER'S signature, is simply one way of writing "Ibach." The words are pronounced alike and mean the same thing. The first syllable of each means "by" and the last "brook," and together mean "by brook;" both are probably offshoots of "Bach" or "brook." The Index to the "Original Lists of Arrivals in the Port of Philadelphia from 1727-1808," by Ralph Beaver Strassburger, LL.D., and Wm. John Hinke, Ph.D. and D.D., shows Ybach with a cross reference; "See Ibach."

The name Ibach is not confined to any country. Among the Swiss who emigrated to North Carolina early in the 18th Century was a family of Ibachs, and they had a community named Ibach. About the same period another family of Ibachs came to Pennsylvania; and more came later. There are Ibachs in Pennsylvania and other States now. Strange to relate, there are Ebaughs in several States who do not claim descent from the Maryland group, and declare their original name was Ibach. Johannes Adolf Ibach, born 10-20-1766, who invented the great Ibach piano, it is said, went to Germany from Switzerland to establish his factories; and, it is said, Steinway learned his trade in one of Ibach's factories. The grand duchy of Baden, Germany, has two cities named Ibach—Oberamt Oberkirsch and Oberamt Ste Blasien. There are Ibachs in Germany now. Some who came to America are said to have come from Alsace.

To obtain a mind's picture of the forces which made the hearts of our forefathers burn for freedom, to brave any danger to themselves or families, it is necessary to read history of their time; too long to repeat here. Religious and political persecution, ravages of war, insufficient land for the population, taxes that were heavy at any time and intolerable in time of famine, were contributing factors but not all of them. Strassburger & Hinke, in their history of Pennsylvania immigrants (3 volumes), describes their privations and sufferings during the long voyage to America, and give other interesting information.

William Penn sent agents to Europe and went to the Palatinate himself to invite those who loved Liberty to come to his Pennsylvania. Protestant families from Ulster and the thickly populated districts of Switzerland and the Rhine country came by thousands. They brought with them an instinctive belief in the right for men to govern themselves, in the right of free speech, and the right to worship God according to the dictates of their own consciences. Their religious beliefs conformed to their secular beliefs in the democratic way of life. Their ideals were that every man should labor as he was able; that none should live by another's toil or waste the hard-earned fruits of industry; that all should live uprightly in the fear of God, and worship Him in spirit and in truth.

Above is a reproduction of the 13th entry in the Baptismal Book of Union Church of Manchester, Carroll County, Maryland. The year was 1760. It records the birth of John Jacob Ebaugh, fourth child of the founders of our family. Translated: the child was born February 15; baptized August 24; father's name was Jacob Ibach (Ebaugh); mother's maiden name was Anna Catherine Giess (Giessin is feminine for Giess, or a female of the family of Giess). This is the only record found giving the maiden name of the mother of all of us. Family tradition says she came from the Rhenish Palatinate, and married Jacob Ybach at sea on their way to America. That has not been proven, but from the ages of their children one may reasonably conclude they were married about 1752. This boy was named after his father, and he dropped Jacob from his name and went through life as John Ebaugh; signed his Will that way. His father went through life as Jacob Ebaugh; signed his Will that way.

By 1750 most of the Indians had left the northern part of Baltimore County. The Susquehannochs had a trail from the Susquehanna river to the Potomac river, which crossed another from Baltimore to Hanover at a point about six miles north of the Ebaugh homestead. Union Church was established near there February 12, 1760, by Reformed and Lutheran Churches. At the same time ground was set apart in which to bury their dead. On September 7, 1762, Jacob Ibach (Ebaugh) headed a list of subscribers to found a school in connection with this church with one pound; none gave more. Like the church, the school was built of logs and cost little. From such humble beginnings serious men and women came to build our great institutions of learning and to make this country great.

The religious, educational, and social life of the earliest Ebaughs centered at Union Church. It was where they worshipped, had their children baptized; where the young folks met and learned to court in the American way. It was a gathering place for the scattered Lutherans and others who wished to come. Some walked many miles to attend services; to sit an hour or more on benches without backs listening to a sermon. "The drowsy member could not settle back and take his Sunday nap." They were tenacious in the preservation of their native language, religion, habits and customs, but sturdy republicans living free from tyrants upon rich lands. But their children preferred to be Americanized in church, as well as in schools and nation. They demanded preaching in English, and that came to pass. The Methodist circuit riders on horses with Bible and hymn book in saddlebags, preaching here and there, with the English language at their command, caught the imagination of the young folks so that inroads were made on the membership of their mother church.

As the country filled up, other churches and schools came into being. St. Paul's Lutheran Church, eight miles south of Manchester, was a child of "Old Union," born 1794. The church and school were built of logs. Seats were made from slabs, with pegs for legs, sans backs. Excerpts from the church record: "While the aged saints listened devoutly in the front benches, the young sinners courted in the back seats as they have ever done." "One minister was so cross that when the young men congregated at the front door after services to see the girls come out, he caned them away." The end of that pastor was not peace, for he was dismissed, and it is presumed the girls had a hand in it. Unfortunately, nearly all of the early records of St. Paul's were destroyed by fire, but it is known that the wife of the FOUNDER joined this church 1795, probable because it was nearer her residence, and that a number of the descendants of the FOUNDER are buried there.

Jacob Ebaugh (Ybach) was a miller. As you have seen, he purchased 100 acres of land from the Province of Maryland and named it "Ober Land in Bern." This land was in the primeval forest one mile west of where Hampstead, Carroll County, is now. It was rough and hilly, but Patapsco Falls ran through it. Into this forest he took his wife. He built a log house, dug a mill race, dammed Patapsco Falls, set up his mill and put its wheels in motion. Maryland wheat was known then as best in the world for flour, which was in great demand for export. It was first to ripen and its flour was first each year to reach the Continental armies during the Revolution. By an Act of Assembly 1704, the toll of a millar was fixed as follows: corn one-sixth part; wheat one-eighth part. Penalty for overcharging was fixed at 1000 pounds of tobacco, which was legal tender at one time in Maryland.

Every good history of Maryland or Pennsylvania portrays the panic after the defeat of General Braddock's army and its retreat to Philadelphia 1755, when the Indians returned to massacre, steal children and devastate the settlers, until driven off by the combined forces of Maryland, Pennsylvania and Virginia several years later. The Indians did not get much farther east than Frederick, Maryland, but the fear was so great that Baltimore Town put up a stockade around it for protection. Histories show, also, how in time the sturdy pioneers brought the soil under cultivation, and made the hills and valleys "blossom like a rose" through their industry and thrift. Just one bit will be added: Jacob Ybach (Ebaugh) did not have his lands and goods confiscated after the Revolution for having aided enemies of the American Revolution. His success through merciless periods of stress is an inspiration.

It is not known where JACOB and CATHERINE were buried, but it is reasonable to suppose they were buried in Union Cemetery, Manchester, Carroll County, Maryland, which they helped to establish. He died September 1790, and she died September 1803. In their day graves were marked principally with field stones, with but little carving on them. The most ancient inscription now legible on the tombstones in Union Cemetery is that of E. Conrad Kerlinger, who died 1798. All headstones erected before, and many since, have crumbled, or the inscriptions have become illegible.

Union Cemetery contains the ashes of many loved ones whose families have been extinct a long time. Trees, briars and bushes were allowed to spread over the original burying ground, but on September 24, 1927, forces were set in motion to clear the ground. When the debris was removed, about 120 headstones with legible inscriptions were found. These were reset in rows; all others were thrown out, for no one knew whose graves they had marked. Among those reset were those of Henry Ebaugh, eldest son of the FOUNDER, who died January 5, 1827; and that of Rachel Reese, first wife of Jacob Ebaugh, eldest grandson of the FOUNDER. Today Union Cemetery presents a serene and beautiful appearance.

Wherever Jacob and Catherine Ebaugh may be buried,

MAY THEIR SOULS REST IN PEACE!

Carroll County did not exist before 1837, when it was carved out of Baltimore and Frederick counties. Prior thereto, Hampstead and Manchester were in Baltimore County, but neither place existed when the FOUNDER of our family settled in the forest one mile west of where Hampstead is now.

HOME OF HENRY EBAUGH

(From a photograph taken January, 1941)

This house is very old, but it is in good condition today. It was built by the Founder of the Family before he died September, 1790, or soon thereafter by his son Henry who succeeded him. It passed out of the family more than a hundred years ago, and it is owned now by Mr. Frank Leister. The mill was dismantled years ago and its timbers now support a store building in Hampstead. The excavations for the 12-foot millwheel and the tail race have been filled from erosion of the county road. A hard surfaced road from Hampstead to Shiloh Methodist Church, to the west at the crest of the first hill, passes the home.

THE NEW YORK STATE SCHOOL

The building is a large, multi-story structure, possibly a school or institutional building, with a prominent central tower or entrance. The building is surrounded by trees and a lawn. The photograph is a black and white print, and the caption below it reads "THE NEW YORK STATE SCHOOL" and "1891-1892".

JOHN JACOB EBAUGH

Founder of the Ebaugh Family of Maryland, came to America September 22, 1752, on the Ship "Brothers" from Rotterdam, late from Cowes, landing at Philadelphia, Pa. He soon became a citizen of Baltimore County in the Province of Maryland, for on September 21, 1753, he purchased from this Province 100 acres of land in the primeval forest one mile west of where Hampstead, Carroll County, is now and named the tract "Ober Land in Bern" (highlands of Bern). The tract was surveyed by Nicholas Ruxton Gay, Deputy Surveyor for Baltimore County, February 28, 1754, and on same day "Jacob Ebaugh" (Ybach) was given title to it. He was a miller and millwright by trade and occupation. Upon this land he set up his home and gristmill, and prospered until he died in September, 1790. He was a native of Switzerland, and among the first of his class of immigrants to move into that part of Maryland from Pennsylvania. About 1752 or 1753, he married Anna Catherine Giess, native of the Rhenish Palatinate, who died September, 1803. Six children: Catherine, Mary, Johannah, Henry, John Jacob and George (not arranged in order of birth), all of whom are named in their Wills, which are filed in Baltimore Court House.

The title to Brown's Meeting House shows the liberal spirit of men of that period towards those of another Christian faith. The desire to help and live in peace and harmony with their neighbors and respect their religious views appears to have been ingrained in them. George Ebaugh (my grandfather) at the time he gave to and became a trustee of Brown's Meeting House, undoubtedly was a member of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, which congregation often displayed a broad and tolerant attitude toward other denominations. Once, when this congregation was without a pastor, a Methodist minister served it for a year.

As you have seen, Union Church of Manchester, Carroll County, Md., was founded by two branches of Lutherans who, in their turns, worshipped there in peace and brotherly love many years, and did not divide until each had means to build a church of their own. Henry Ebaugh, eldest son of our Founder, was an Elder of Union Church 1809. As the country filled up, many union churches were established, and a number of them exist today with handsome edifices.

In Pennsylvania where John Ebaugh, second son of our Founder lived there was an interdenominational church called Union Associate Church of Mechanicsburg, which was composed of four or more denominations. Judge Adam Ebaugh, son of John, at one time represented the Reformed element of this church.

The writer, having attended Sunday school and Church services in Brown's Meeting House in his young days, hopes to be pardoned for giving a brief history of it. It was built about 1800 of logs and had a gallery. The cost was small, for all pitched in to hew and notch the logs and put them in place. Loose boards were laid across trestles for seats. The Methodists obtained full title to the property and remodeled the church 1840 by plastering the outside and putting in benches, some with backs and some without.

In 1878 it was decided to build a new church and name it WESLEY CHAPEL. My father, Zachariah Ebaugh, was on the building committee; also, of the parsonage in Hampstead and a trustee until he died. (Wesley Chapel became one of ten or thirteen Methodist churches composing the Hampstead Circuit.) The walls were stone, plastered on the inside. Every one lent a hand at the work; donated teams for hauling and labor for quarrying, etc., so that the actual money cost was only $1400.00 for a good, comfortable edifice. For years thereafter, like its predecessor, the women sat on the left side; men on the right; the middle row of benches being partitioned down to the seats; but that did not prevent any who were inclined from holding hands under the partition while kneeling during prayer.

Wesley Chapel burned September 3, 1919, and a church costing $35,000.00 was erected in its place. With beautiful Memorial Windows encased in walls of attractive stone and a well-appointed interior, this church is one of the finest in rural Methodism. Contrasted with the original church where seats were loose boards resting upon trestles; and the days when a "blue ticket" with a scriptural verse on it was given for Sunday School attendance, and five "blue ones" were exchanged for a "red ticket," and so many "reds" meant something more, this congregation has progressed far. Whether they sing with greater gusto or pray more earnestly and get more good out of it than the old folks did in their modest House of Worship is a matter of opinion.

The following relics of old Brown's Meeting House have been preserved: the Mourners Bench; Communion Table; two straight back benches from the Amen Corner; two plush-lined wicker Collection Baskets; the Holy Bible, and hymn book; the latter a reminder of the days when there were seldom more than a few for the congregation.

Today there are Ebaughs in every Christian denomination; some, like their forefathers, are holding important offices of honor and trust in their churches.
